APA Citation Guide

A book by a single author

A book by two authors

A book with two editors

Electronic Book

Chapter in an edited book

Print Article in a Scholarly Journal

Scholarly articles from databases- with DOI

When citing an online journal with APA, always include the DOI (Digital Object Identifier) if it is available. The DOI is a unique alphanumeric string that identifies articles. The DOI is usually listed on the first page of an article. In addition, EBSCO and Proquest databases will include the DOI in the citation if it is available.
Scholarly Article from a database without DOI (No DOI was provided)

The article was retrieved from an EBSCO database, but we searched the Internet for the URL of the journal.

CQ Researcher database

Opposing Viewpoints database

Print article from a magazine

Magazine article from a database- Only the starting page listed

The article was retrieved from an EBSCO database, but we searched the Internet for the URL of the journal.

Magazine article without an author from a database

The article was retrieved from a Proquest database, but we searched the Internet for the URL of the journal.

Print article in a newspaper

Newspaper article from a database

This article was retrieved from a Proquest database, but we searched the Internet for the URL of the journal.

Reference book or encyclopedia

Web Site
Roosevelt, F. (1941). Radio address by the President of the United States broadcast from the White House, on Tuesday, December 9, 1941. Retrieved from http://www.yale.edu/lawweb/avalon/wwii/dec/dec06.htm.

Film or Video Recording

Source: Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association, Sixth Ed.

Disclaimer: the ultimate authority for the correct method of citing sources is your professor.

7/29/2013